

Lichtveen Farm

Chris and Pauline are co-owner of Lichtveen farm. They have been doing no-dig farming since four (4) years and they are happy with the way things are going. For them, the use of nets against frost and insects are important and they are working tirelessly to reduce their off-farm input such as composts in the near future. They also manage weed and pests manually.

Beds with vegetables

Beds protected against frost

Plastic poly for bed covering to kill weeds

Nets protecting against insect pest

Creating spots for planting

Transplanting by Chris

Pauline is in the market happily meeting consumer demands